

New Zealand Job Expos in Australia 2015

Are you having trouble recruiting the skilled workers you need?

Based on the success of the New Zealand Job Expos in Perth and Sydney in November, the Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment (MBIE) and Working In are holding recruitment events in Brisbane and Melbourne in March and April. You can meet and recruit New Zealanders and Australian residents who have the skills and experience that you need now.

Brisbane: 14-15 March 2015

With a population of over two million and with the largest population of New Zealand born people for any city in Australia, Brisbane is a perfect location to recruit skilled people. The unemployment rate in Queensland is high compared to New Zealand, and Brisbane has also been affected by the downturn in the mining industry.

Like the Perth Expo which attracted 1,750 people wanting to move to New Zealand, there will be an opportunity to meet and recruit New Zealanders who moved to Brisbane in the boom but are now looking to return home.

Melbourne: 18-19 April 2015

With a population of four million and home to approximately 67,000 New Zealanders, Melbourne is a natural destination for finding skilled people. Victoria's unemployment rate is 6.5% and some economists believe that will worsen over 2015. Like the Sydney Expo, which attracted high end skills, the Melbourne Expo will be heavily promoted to the New Zealand expat community and to people living in Melbourne thinking about moving.

Both expos are supported by MBIE and Working In and the cost of stands has been significantly reduced. There has never been a better time to recruit workers from Australia.
